HILARY and DICK TULLOCH come from military families and were both army officers, sharing an interest in history and historical places. While resident in Bermuda, they explored the island and discovered the enchantment of its old cemeteries with their long-forgotten memorials. The husband and wife team noticed that many headstones in the local cemeteries were deteriorating and took it upon themselves to record the inscriptions. Together they have unveiled the mysteries of military abbreviations and deciphered whimsical verses and poignant epitaphs.

This 358 page hard cover publication is a collection comprising transcriptions of all the memorials extant in the naval, military and historic cemeteries in Bermuda and those of St. Peter's Church. In addition, from the parish and community cemeteries there is a selection of memorials of sailors, soldiers, airmen and others, both local and overseas. Many of these people were Bermudians and other British subjects, but there were also people from the four corners of the world who came to these as servants, slaves merchants or mariners, convicts and ambassadors and whose last resting place is Bermuda.

The volume also includes short histories of each of the naval, military and historic cemeteries now managed by the Bermuda National Trust.
